

Dad Jokes, Like Raspberries, Are Funny!

Your Private Information Made Public is Not.

1. Facebook change their settings again?

Periodically check your social media account settings to ensure their changes don't affect your privacy.

2. Asked to provide a photo ID?

Avoid using your Driver's license, if possible, to minimize sharing details such as your birthday and address.

3. Tired of spam in your inbox?

Create a unique email address for use when companies require one. It will also protect you in the event one of those companies is hacked.

4. Zip code requested at checkout?

Give a false answer to avoid your identity being used by the retailer for more than just their marketing material.

5. Use a single password for multiple accounts?

Create unique accounts to halt the domino effect if a hacker were to access one of them.

SECURITY IS EVERYONE'S RESPONSIBILITY!
