

Increasing academic performance for students who have been impacted by high mobility requires engagement strategies that demonstrate understanding of these student's often traumatic histories.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY

HOMELESS STUDENTS
22,000
STUDENTS IN FOSTER CARE 1,100

Schools can face extra challenges in identifying and serving highly mobile students.

Teachers can help counteract the harmful effects of foster care and homelessness on education by learning about these students and the barriers to their success.

Foster Youth Coordinating Services Program & Homeless Education Services Present

Beyond the Mandates: Engaging Students in Foster Care and Those Experiencing Homelessness

Learning Objectives:

1. Increase ability of school site staff to identify students in foster care and those experiencing homelessness.
2. Increase understanding of causes, and educational challenges of these highly mobile students.
3. Learn about the key provisions in the law to support these students.
4. Learn strategies schools and school site staff can employ to engage and support these student populations.
